PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

This annual event brings together cardiologists, cardio-thoracic surgeons, internists, family practitioners, gerontologists, oncologists, cardiac nurse practitioners, physician assistants, cardiology fellows in training (FITs) and all members of the cardiovascular team. The event is presented by New York Cardiological Society, the New York State Chapter of the American College of Cardiology and the New York Cardiac Center.

This year's conference will feature the winners of the Annual Young Investigators' Competition, which is now open, and this year will ALSO feature the winners of the Inaugural NY FIT Jeopardy Competition!

TARGET AUDIENCE

This activity is intended for cardiologists, cardiothoracic surgeons, internists, family medicine practitioners, gerontologists, oncologists, cardiac nurse practitioners, physician assistants, cardiology fellows-in-training (FITs), all members of the cardiovascular team and any other healthcare professionals engaged in the care of patients with CVD.

PROGRAM OBJECTIVES

After completing this activity, the participant should be better able to:

- Explain differences and similarities in AMI presentation and management between the U.S. and Argentina, analyze the reasons for these differences and identify the barriers to perform rapid reperfusion therapy
- Explain the importance of ICMP in the epidemiology and mortality attributed to heart failure and describe the treatment modalities available to improve the prognosis of patients with ICMP
- Discuss the value of different test results in selecting patients with ICMP with greatest potential for benefit from surgical revascularization
- Describe potential advantages of a robotic totally endoscopic procedure
- Identify candidates for robotic totally endoscopic mitral valve repair
- Determine when it is proper to use new oral anticoagulants in ACS
- Determine current biomarkers and their role in establishing the diagnosis and prognosis of heart failure
- Differentiate between the type and severity of heart failure based on patient history, evaluation and diagnostic workup
- Describe the benefits and limitations of current heart failure therapies and discuss new and emerging therapies for heart failure and their role in the therapeutic management
- Explain the effects and implications of risk factors and comorbidities on potassium levels and hyperkalemia in heart failure patients

The New York Cardiological Society and New York State Chapter of the American College of Cardiology thank New York Cardiac Center for its continuing educational support.

Physician Continuing Medical Education

This activity has been planned and implemented in accordance with the accreditation requirements and policies of the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME) through the joint providership of Postgraduate Institute for Medicine and The New York Cardiological Society. The Postgraduate Institute for Medicine is accredited by the ACCME to provide continuing medical education for physicians. The Postgraduate Institute for Medicine designates this live activity for a maximum of 7.0 AMA PRA Category 1 Credit(s)[™]. Physicians should claim only the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.

Disclosure of Conflicts of Interest

Postgraduate Institute for Medicine (PIM) requires instructors, planners, managers and other individuals who are in a position to control the content of this activity to disclose any real or apparent conflict of interest (COI) they may have as related to the content of this activity. All identified COI are thoroughly vetted and resolved according to PIM policy. The existence or absence of COI for everyone in a position to control content will be disclosed to participants prior to the start of each activity.

This activity is jointly provided by Postgraduate Institute for Medicine and The New York Cardiological Society.
